

THE BIRTH OF THE WHEEL part 7

Once palletized, the wheels are stored in the automated warehouse, where all pallets are encoded.

Every Monday, the Sales Managers meet the Production Manager to organize the shipments of the week.

After the meeting, the trucks are booked and the warehousemen prepare the pallets for each shipment:

They select the codes given to the pallets by the computer system in the automated warehouse, and the goods are sent directly to the loading / unloading area.

When the truck arrives, the pallets are picked up and your wheels are ready to be dispatched and delivered to you!

ITALIAN PEOPLE

If you deal with Italian people you should better know them well... "AT POST OFFICE"

When you live in Italy for few months, you probably need to go to the post office.

This place is like a parallel universe, where the laws of time and space no longer apply. You should fight like a ninja, be faster than the old man behind your shoulder and not to be compassionate with the pretty grandma on your left, because she will stay at the desk for half an hour, questioning everything listed in her annuity.

Typical waiting line in an Italian Post Office.

DID YOU KNOW THAT...?

Let's introduce you our new entry: Silvia Malzanni. She is 26 years old, just turned at the end of January. Before becoming a member of Percia's Team, Silvia made two different work experiences:

the first one in a Multinational Company near Bergamo, where she had the responsibility to organize employee expatriation and business trips. The last one was in a temporary agency and she helped people to find job.

Both experiences let her grow up and taught how to meet people from all over the world.

Graduate in Bergamo, at literature and foreign languages University, Silvia would like to improve her linguistic skills and know a new world: Wheels! In her spare time, she loves cooking for her friends and family, reason why Silvia decided to open a "cousine" blog.

Tania, Marta, Fabrizio and Silvia celebrate the New Entry!
